NOTES

Since the commentary on RVF begins with an incomplete sentence, it seems clear that the ms. lacks its opening fols., where commentary on RVF 1-40 was presumably written.

The exegetical exposition (largely in vernacular, but with some sentences in Latin) mainly gives lexical paraphrase of poems and provides textual explanations, often simply rephrasing the sense, and sometimes focusing on historical or contextual references to which the poem alludes.

Scattered marginal annotations by the same hand add a few missing lines; occasional other annotations by at least two later hands either add a few brief notes (mainly on rhetorical aspects of the poems), or point out the names of either the characters or other references.
