NOTES

Next to the Triumph, occasional marginal annotations by a cursive humanistic script record some variant readings (e.g. at fol. 177v, next to Triumphus Fame III.16, the annotator writes 'Da man sinistra' and erases 'A mano aman' of the main text).

Fol. Iv has a full-page illumination showing Petrarch writing at his desk and simultaneously keeping the mark on a book on a bookstand with his left hand.

Fols. 1r, 103r, and 143r have three architectural frames, each with three floral decorated borders and a rectangular-box illumination at the top of the fol. The first illumination shows Laura before other women in an open landscape offering Petrarch a bay leaf. The second illumination shows Petrarch in front of Laura's buried skeleton. The last illumination shows Petrarch praying in front of the Virgin Mary. The decorative scheme of the ms. has been attributed to Bartolomeo Varnucci and reproduces with some variations the decoration of ms. Palatino 184 of the Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale of Florence (Nicolini 2010). Decorated initials in gold for RVF 1 (fol. 1r), 264 (fol. 103r), 366 (fol. 143r), and Triumphus Amoris I (fol. 147r).
